(By International News Service.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—A final and supreme effort to settle the national strike of railway shopmen through the intercession of other branches of unionized railway labor, was undertaken here this afternoon when leaders from five different non-striking brotherhoods met a committee from the railway executives.

It was not expected that an agreement could be effected at once, but there was an undertone of optimism that common ground would be reached, which would furnish the basis for a settlement later on.

As the delegates arrived on the seventeenth floor at 61 Broadway, members of the executives committee admitted they knew nothing of the nature of the proposals the railroad men were to put up to them. At the same time they pointed out that while the committee is empowered to receive proposals, it had no authority to act upon them.

They must be submitted to the railway presidents for final action.

While most of the members of the executives committee were "standing pat," it was understood that the suggestion was being urged that they yield on some minor points if the main principles of their contentions are not modified.

Representatives of the executive indicated that they believed their position had become stronger through the large number of new men who have been taken on recently. On the other hand the strikers have contended that the spread of sporadic walkouts from the shopmen to the ranks of other railroad unions has greatly strengthened their hand.

A number of rail workers have quit work in sympathy, claiming that equipment has become so gun down through lack of shop repairs that they were afraid to continue at work.

It was expected that immediately after the meeting convened, the representatives of the "Big Four" would hand in a set of proposals as the basis for decisive negotiations for settlement of the strike.

After these had been digested, discussion was expected to follow. Whether the committee was prepared to submit counter proposals was not revealed. While the committee has no power to make a final decision, it has wide authority. It was the same committee which was appointed to draft the reply to the second set of propositions by President Harding for the settlement of the strike.

Revenue Board
Inspecting Road

The county board of revenue is still in session at the court house. The board is today making an inspection trip down the Courtland road, where road projects are under consideration. The board is seeking to rush all road projects under contemplation to completion as fast as is possible, having in mind the approaching wet weather season, when it will be nearly impossible to continue the work with any degree of certainty. A report by one of the members is to the effect, that all work is progressing satisfactorily at the different points where the state over the county has been made.

Wants Share of $40,000,000 Ream Estate

Mrs. Frank M. Downer, Jr., formerly Miss Yenora Ream, beautiful niece of the late Norman B. Ream, has entered suit in Chicago for a $100,000 share of his $40,000,000 estate. When his younger brother, John, found himself in financial difficulties, Norman Ream took the two younger boys and Leona to raise. She was placed in care of Mrs. Heddle, in Osceola. When she was nineteen she lost a hand in an accident on the C. B. & Q. Railroad, in which Ream was one of the principal stockholders. That suit was settled for $2,500, with the understanding, she alleges, that Ream would take care of her for the rest of her life and provide for her in his will. Ream died two years after her marriage to Downer, and the provisions of the will were said to have been so disappointing that Downer left her.

Campaign Consider Ways and Means Marketing Cotton Starts

(Montgomery Bureau)

MONTGOMERY, ALA., Aug. 17. (Special)—Beginning at Greenville and Troy Wednesday, August 16, a series of county-wide mass meetings of farmers for the purpose of considering ways and means of marketing cotton in a co-operative way are being held throughout Alabama. These meetings will continue until Thursday, September 7, during which time fifty-one counties will be reached.

According to Roy C. Bishop, secretary-manager of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, they are part of the regular field service plans of the Alabama Extension Service, Farm Bureau, and the Cotton Association and one or more persons thoroughly familiar with the handling of cotton in a co-operative way will be at each meeting to assist the county agent and the county Farm Bureau officials in furnishing the desired information. Each meeting will be held under the immediate supervision of the county agent and under the direction of the district agents from Auburn.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—President Harding decided this afternoon not to appear before Congress today.

The President telephoned Senator Watson, Republican of Indiana, that he would not go to the capitol today and that if the New York peace conference is successful he may not go at all.

If the meeting in New York today does not lay the foundation for adjustment of the railway strike the President will probably proceed with his plan to address Congress tomorrow.

Decision by the President not to address Congress today followed a considerable period of conferences with Congressional leaders. Meanwhile the President continued work on his nearly completed message.

(By Associated Press.)

SENIORITY MAIN QUESTION

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—President Harding had not completed his address to Congress, early today, on the national strike situation which he had intended to deliver today.

The President's close advisers continued to urge him to defer his appearance in Congress until today's conference to be held in New York between the Big Four leaders and the railway executives is ended. It is believed that the seniority riddle will be the main question at the conference.

Mrs. Rhinehart Is Supreme In

(By J. E. Blair)

To those he believes that personality once it has fully come into its own is more enduring and more powerful than what we call the laws of heredity or those of the mind, Mary Roberts Rhinehart's latest book—"The Breaking Point" has come as a message of hope and assurance.

Mrs. Rhinehart's "good" characters in the book such as Dr. David Livingstone, his sister Mrs. Lucy Crosby, Elizabeth Wheeler and her father Walter Wheeler and Doctor "Dick" Livingstone, alias Judson Clark all come to the "breaking point" in life's hard school, but they do not break. Like staunch race horses doing their best despite scourge and steel spur, these characters in the book, run life's race with patience, although they do not lay aside as many weights it would seem they could, and they remain of good will as long as they have any will at all. True Dr. David, gives up the fight against outrageous fortune; but he is not a quitter, he simply contributed all he had and passed. Mrs. Crosby died in the conflict, but she did not accept death's embrace, until she had fought a good fight and kept the faith. If there is a hero in the book it is Walter Wheeler although he does not appear to

(By International News Service.)

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Leaders of the Big Four and a committee representing the association of railway executives were to meet here this afternoon in what is expected to be the most important meeting held since the strike began. Definite progress towards the settlement of the strike for a final decision to fight the strike through to a finish is the probable result.

All the Brotherhood chiefs were on hand early today but they would make no comment on the parley.

The railway executives likewise would not discuss the conference.

"You know as much about it as I do," was the answer from Warren S. Stone, chief of the brotherhood of locomotive engineers when questioned.

He made it clear however that he believed the conference would be productive of important developments.

In addition to the brotherhood leaders, officials representing all of the unions affected by the strike will be in session either in New York City or near by. They will be in constant touch with the brotherhood leaders and will be kept advised of the progress of the conference.

The President's close advisers continued to urge him to defer his appearance in Congress until today's conference to be held in New York between the Big Four leaders and the railway executives is ended. It is believed that the seniority riddle will be the main question at the conference.

It is understood the conference will have before it the proposal by C. C. McChord, chairman of the Interstate Commerce Commission. This proposal is said to word the strikers' demand for seniority right in such a way that it will be acceptable to the executives.

Majority of the executives are expected to favor the adoption of the plan. The opposition, it is said, will come from the Pennsylvania and Lehigh Valley. The union representatives are understood to have advanced the suggestion that a settlement be made with the roads willing to make concession and that the rest be left outside. It is not believed however that this suggestion will be acceptable.

The following official statement was issued by H. C. Hutchinson, chairman of the press committee of the Federated Shop Crafts:

One of the rousing addresses made here since July 1st, was made at the Masonic theater this morning by Rev. J. E. Merrill, who in 1914, was pastor of the Southside Baptist church of Albany.

Rev. Merrill now lives in Arkansas.

He preceded his address by what he called a "sermonette," and he based it on the text: "Fret not thyself because of evil doers, neither desire to be with them." He recounted how labor wages had been cut but said that high freight rates continued. He told of a railroad in Texas trying to charge $65.00 freight on a pony, but that a taxi line took the same pony for $6.00. In speaking of the strike, the speaker said that, "no responsible spokesman of the pulpit had ever said publicly at least that this was not a righteous strike." The preacher delivered a stern warning against any who had been guilty of the use of explosives.

Frank Lewis in behalf of relief committee, spoke of a number of donations made to the committee. H. O. Cline spoke, interestingly at some length. S. E. Roper also delivered an interesting address. Mr. Roper is chairman of the system federation of the L. & N. railroad.

The following preliminary exercises preceded the address of Rev. Merrill.

Opening prayer by L. R. Yarborough, music by C. E. Hubbard and his daughters, Mert and Lorraine. Mr. Hubbard playing the violin and the young women the mandolin and guitar. This instrumental music was heartily cheered. A quartette was rendered by Fred, Charles and John Halbrooks, and George Evans. The closing prayer was by L. E. Town, the Chaplain.

Agreement between the United States and Germany to set up a bi-partite commission to pass upon American war claims against Germany is believed to be well under way to accomplishment. The Commission would consist of one German and one American member, with an umpire to render a deciding vote when necessary. Associate Justice William R. Day, of the United States Supreme Court, has been named by President Harding as umpire.

WE FAVOR ACCEPTANCE OF HENRY FORD'S BID
FOR MUSCLE SHOALS.NORTHCLIFFE PROVED ONCE AGAIN THAT THE PEN IS MIGHTIER THAN THE SWORD.

"The pen is mightier than the sword," is one of the accepted truisms of this world. It is absolutely true however, only where reason has won over force. Not always has force been vanquished. Many supporters of force have in the past won their contentions. This was brought clearly to the mind of the world during the World War, and especially were we reminded of it, whenever the German armies, that had been in training off and on for 40 years, seemed to be on the road to Paris and to world domination. The fact was pointed out that every great military drive of the past, when such men as Alexander, Caesar, and Napoleon did the driving ended in a triumph for force. Until during the last World War, the pen and what it stood for seemed to be of only second rate importance. And in this war, for quite a period, force ruled and the pen or human thought had little influence. Not until a newspaper man named Northcliffe, then famous but now "Colossal" in death, according to The Commercial-Appeal—began to think and write or have it done, did the pen ever come fully into its own and to it" dominated kings, armies and statesmen" to quote The Commercial-Appeal once more. In other words Northcliffe was one of the few outstanding men of all time who actually proved that "the pen is mightier than the sword".

Not only do the friends of the dead editor say he out-did the German armies, but his sworn enemies among the Central Powers testify to the same thing. The autocratic press of Germany, ever since the death of Northcliffe, has not lost an opportunity to say that the English writer, and executive, did more to put the German armies to flight than the sword of Foch, and those of all the other Allied Generals.

The German press says that Northcliffe's barage of pro-ally propaganda, was more decisive than the millions of tons of munitions fired against the German hosts. Not content at saying Northcliffe won the war up to the time America entered the conflict, such men as Ludendorff say Northcliffe's papers inveigled against the Central Powers as far back as 1912. One of the moves made by Northcliffe against the German menace after the war began, was directed against England's greatest modern idol at that time, Lord Kitchener of Kortown. It could easily have meant the tower and death to Northcliffe to attack Kitchener, but he did it. He revealed to the British public that while the Allied soldiers were being destroyed with high explosive shells, Kitchener was sending to the battle front, only a light grade of shrapnel. As a result of his pen service, more destructive shells were sent against the Germans. And again when Herbert Asquith, as Premier of England was conducting a too lady-like warfare to win, Northcliffe summoned Lloyd George to the helm of the British ship of state.

Outside of Northcliffe's influence as a maker of statesmen and of commanding generals, during the World War, his propaganda work in behalf of the Allied cause, stands in the first rank. German papers of the last few days openly admit that Northcliffe's anti-German propaganda was much cleverer and more effective, than any of the anti-British propaganda German writers were able to manufacture and put upon the world market of thought.

TIME THE PUBLISHING INDUSTRY
WAS GIVEN SOME TAXATION RELIEF.

Of all the essential industries that bore the burden of greatly increased war taxation, the newspapers had perhaps the heaviest load, and the newspapers have not yet been given relief from this tax burden. In practically all other lines of industry and commerce tax relief has been given by the Federal government, but not to the newspapers.

This is shown in a timely and comprehensive editorial in the Montgomery Advertiser of Tuesday. The Advertiser said:

"Congress has not yet adopted the bill of representative Kelly, of Pennsylvania, reducing the increased rates on second-class postage which were put into effect in 1921, under the terms of a war revenue bill passed in 1917. These rates have imposed an unnecessary burden on the newspapers of America which cannot be passed on to advertisers or readers. They were made at a time when the newspapers were enjoying a largely increased advertising patronage and when the burden was not as onerous as it is at this time. The two increases in postal rates on newspapers amount to four times the pre-war charges. While paying this excessive special tax, the publishers have been paying all other taxes levied upon industry as a whole, and are still suffering under high costs of labor, paper, news services and the many essentials in the making of a newspaper. At the recent conference of the American publishers in New York attention was drawn to the significance of there is perpetual sunshine."

this special tax on the circulation of newspapers as a tax on the circulation of newspapers as a tax on a process of industry. It is a recognized principle of taxation that taxes should be levied on products and not on processes. The publishers have been forced to pay on both.

The conference mentioned emphasized the principle that no country is able to take advantage of its full opportunities without adequate highways of information for all the people. For this reason the government has heretofore recognized the necessity for low rates on newspapers and periodicals. Every interchange of commodities must be preceded by an interchange of ideas, of information, of proposals and acceptances and this important function of the newspapers is the mainstay of national business in the volume which gives national prosperity. The people would make a great outcry against the taxing of schools, yet the 93 per cent of the youth of America which does not go beyond the grammar grades must get further education from reading. The present law is virtually a tax on this source of education.

In 1918 the government collected from the publishers of newspapers and periodicals in postal charges $11,712,068. In the last fiscal year this has grown to $25,496,719, and it is estimated that in the current year the publishers will pay the government for carrying their papers the huge sum of $33,000,000. This, notwithstanding that the high rates have forced out of the mails an enormous tonnage of newspapers and magazines which now go by express baggage, motor truck, freight or by water routes for less than the government will give the same service.

Many of the most necessary publications cannot be shipped in bulk lots for distribution at points distant from the places of origin; they must pay the excessive postal rates. Among these are business and technical papers carrying important information to manufacturers, wholesalers and retailers and professional men; the farm papers which are raising the standards of agriculture and performing a great national service; the religious papers which promote the spiritual life of the country; the fraternal publications which bind together groups of men and women for their common good; the educational papers which carry the light of new knowledge into the humblest homes, and many other publications of similar usefulness. The smaller these papers, the heavier the burden they have to bear. The larger publications are able to develop their own systems of transportation. The fact will be also apparent that the postal burden upon educational papers because it retards their development, is a very distinct burden upon that portion of the public which most needs the enlightening force of instructive reading."

Newspaper publishers are not asking for anything unreasonable. They have certainly done their part in carrying a heavy burden during and since the war in free publicity given to every government and charitable movement, they have not hesitated to grant every request of the government and every worthy appeal of organizations that needed assistance as a result of the war and the war's aftermath. The papers therefore are entitled at least to a reasonable relief.

They request the repeal of the two last increases in the postal rates on second-class matter which went into effect after the war and which will still give the government approximately 175 per cent more than the pre-war rates and will not relieve the publishing industry of one cent of the federal taxes paid by all industries. The further fact is offered for the consideration of Congress, that the special or super-taxes which the war-revenue measure imposed on several industries have been taken off or materially reduced. The question may rightfully be asked, is it fair that the publishing industry should be singled out to continue paying special war taxes when these have been removed from all other industries?—Anniston Star.

THE INDUSTRIAL SKIES ARE BRIGHTENING.

That the industrial skies are brightening to some extent is conveyed in the dispatches sent broadcast Wednesday, that several thousand miners who have been idle since March 1st, returned to work. This is good news, and further happenings along this line are confidently looked for during the remaining days of the week. Powerful pacific influences are at work, and something is almost sure to come of the efforts which are being put forth to restore united effort on the part of the industrial workers of the nation, that they may be enabled to again go forth in the great business of the nation in their respective lines. Winter in many sections of the country is less than 60 days away, and winter calls for some of the things in which industry in that particular line has been stopped for some time.

BLOOD TRANSFUSIONS.

A few years ago a transfusion operation in the effort save a life was a rare occurrence. Today, this operation is frequent, and has been the means of saving lives which otherwise would have been an impossibility. Many pathetic cases are on record where others have offered their own life blood for a friend or relative, and through this means the sick one was restored back to health and friends.

Blood is the life of the body. This operation now simple enough to the trained ones, offers the means of saving many. It is necessary that the one from the blood is drawn be perfectly healthy. A strong argument for preservation of the body and the use of all the means at hand to keep physically fit. Those who keep their bodies thus, are in position to be the means of saving a life, and no one knows when the time and circumstances will demand just such an operation.

REV. J. E. MERRILL IS VISITOR HERE

Rev. J. E. Merrill, and family of Dermott, Ark., are visiting friends in the Twin Cities. Rev. Merrill was pastor of the First Baptist church of Albany some years ago, and later of the South Side Baptist church, which congregation he organized and was active in the erection of the present South Side Baptist church. Tonight he will occupy the pulpit of

Last night Rev. Merrill preached to the South Side Baptist congregation after being presented in a few appreciative words by Rev. G. C. Walker, the pastor.

Outline of Sermon

The speaker took as his text "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness and all these things shall be added unto you." By way of introduction Rev. Merrill stressed the importance of seeking Christ and His Kingdom in a general way. He then reminded his hearers in the first place that they had no choice but to launch out on the voyage of life. He declared that Christ alone had the chart and compass, that could guide life's tempestuous sea. He said the storms of sickness, of loss, and finally of death were sure to come, and that preparation should be made for every eventuality.

In the second place, Matt. 23:18, was quoted where Christ said that all power in heaven and earth was given to Him. "What ever we need, He has it," declared the preacher. He can furnish us so as to ensure our happiness and His glory."

In the last place, the speaker taught, that without Christ there could be no heaven. Rev. Merrill stated last night that he would conduct the devotional exercises at the railroaders meeting to lay at the Princess Theatre.

IRBY ROBERTS IS BITTEN BY SNAKE, PLAN OPERATION

While Irby Roberts, a young man of near Neel, was out fishing in Duck pond, he was bitten by a cotton mouth snake, and he is now in a very serious condition. The snake had been observed and was shot by one of the party and supposedly killed. The fishing continued, Roberts wading out into the water to get to a good vantage point from which to cast his line, was attacked by the snake, and bitten midway between the ankle and the knee. He at once began to suffer great pain, and came on shore to find out that he was bitten, two fangs of the snake having penetrated his flesh about an inch apart, giving some idea of the immense proportions of the reptile. He was carried home and medical help summoned. For a circle two inches in diameter the flesh had turned black and gangrenous.

Plans are being made to bring the unfortunate young man to the Benevolent Hospital, today where an operation will be carried out in the hope to save his life. This snake is one of the most poisonous and vicious of this locality and is feared by every one.
